Relationships and creativity.

For Domani Wealth’s Manager of Human Resources, April Papst, one of the best things about her role is creating solutions and developing relationships with the whole team.

“I like to help team members navigate workplace challenges and offer solutions to help meet their specific needs, as well as engage to think more deeply to find the root cause of any issues,” she says.

In her role, April is responsible for maintaining policies and procedures, managing recruiting and onboarding of new team members, leading the annual performance review process, and supporting internal operations and leadership development.

Each of these responsibilities uses April’s skill set. She enjoys researching and developing meaningful projects, engaging with team members, and applying her creativity in the day-to-day conversations. She is known for being responsive and caring, and ensuring everyone’s voice is heard.

April first began her career as a secondary English teacher, and later made the switch to working in human resources. “I enjoyed teaching, but I knew I wanted more. The transferable skills from teaching to HR is surprising, and it’s been the perfect fit,” she says.

April also helps to shape the firm’s culture and core values, develop career opportunities for team members, and evaluate and implement professional development training.

The core value of Domani Wealth that most resonates with April is accountability. It’s the cornerstone of our company, she says. If you can’t take accountability for actions, then everything else will collapse.

If she had a day to herself, she would go shopping and get a massage, and probably enjoy some authentic Italian food. April is a dog person and has a lab mix named Charlie Boone.
